

I am unable to perform a flash test, what are suitable alternatives?

There are several situations in which a flash test may not be advisable or even possible.

Some of the things you should consider are:

- Does the product have a digital switch?
- Does the product have surge protection built in?
- Does the product have sensitive electronic components?
- Does the manufacturer recommend a different test?

Worry not, there are options available; check out our previous webinar on the subject at the link below or get in touch with us for some honest advice about your particular situation.
